A NOTE FROM THE PROVOST

It is my pleasure to introduce to you this updated handbook of the Postgraduate College, University of Ibadan, the flagship of postgraduate education in Nigeria. The first edition of this handbook was published in 2011 when the college was still referred to as the Postgraduate School. Following our upgrade to a college status in 2018 and attendant changes with the growth of the university's postgraduate education, we see the need to update this handbook in order to make it relevant to the contemporary time. This second edition contains facts, figures and updated information about the Postgraduate College.

The University of Ibadan retains her commitment to unparalleled excellence in teaching, research and community service. Our pedigree within the international community lies in our increased competence to excel in these three domains. This handbook documents our vision, procedures, growth and impact stories recorded over the years.

In order to help enhance the overall development of every student, this handbook also contains vital information on recreational/social facilities within the University Campus itself and around the Ibadan metropolis. Our goal is to encourage all Postgraduate students to take advantage of these facilities as well as the various religious facilities and worship centres for a holistic postgraduate experience.

ABOUT THE UNIVERSITY OF IBADAN (UI)

UI Main Gate

Congratulations on your admission to the University of Ibadan, the Great UI! Welcome to the paths trodden by several generations of great women and men. Here is a brief history of UI which is meant to connect you with our rich past, link you with our richer present and prepare you to be part of our glorious future.

Established in 1948, the University of Ibadan, UI as it is fondly referred to, is the first University in Nigeria. Until 1962 when it became a full-fledged independent University, it was a College of the University of London in a special relationship scheme. Today, the University has a total enrolment of over 26,000 students shared among 17 different faculties: Arts, Science, Basic Medical Sciences, Clinical Sciences, Agriculture, The Social Sciences, Education, Veterinary Medicine, Technology, Pharmacy, Law, Public Health, Dentistry, Economics and Management Sciences, Renewable Natural Resources, Environmental Design and Management, and Multidisciplinary Studies; the University of Ibadan School of Business; and two institutes: Institute of African Studies and Institute of Education. Opportunity exists for interested candidates to run programmes on Open Distance Learning mode, where applicable.

The University of Ibadan Postgraduate college is, well acknowledged within and outside the country as one of the largest in Africa and the flagship of postgraduate education in Nigeria as it produces the much required human resources for the entire Nigerian University system, the Nigerian public and private sectors and beyond. The Postgraduate College enrolment takes about 50% of the entire student enrolment. University of Ibadan produces an average of 3,000 Masters and 250 Ph.Ds every year. The University currently hosts the Pan African University Life and Earth Sciences Institute on behalf of the West African Subregion. This is an initiative of the African Union. The programme is in its 8th year and has 235 students from all over Africa. The main thrust of the University for the 21st century is to be world-class institution for academic excellence geared towards meeting societal needs. Today, the University is consistently ranked among the prestigious Universities in the world.

There are twelve Halls of Residence which provide accommodation for about 30% of the population of all students in the regular studies mode. In addition, there are three private halls of residence to cater for the needs of students of different categories. The University has housing units occupied by senior and junior staff. The University of Ibadan is, therefore, a truly complex organisation. Its governance is based on the Committee System; all the Boards and Committees report to Council and/or Senate. In order to carry out its main functions of teaching, research and community service, the University has been providing to a large extent, basic services like electricity and water supply, security, health facilities and other municipal services to its staff and students.

Through its alumni and alumnae, the University of Ibadan has, in the past over seven decades, contributed significantly to the political, industrial, economic and cultural development of Nigeria. These graduates, staff and students are making great impact on the world through their new discoveries, innovations and inventions in science, medicine, agriculture, business and technology. No doubt, the University's commitment to academic excellence enables them to fly high.

UI looks forward to an exciting future!

Academic and Official Costumes

As part of the living traditions, UI has traditional academic and official costumes. You can identify the degrees to which a person is being admitted (during graduation) simply on sighting the academic gown the person is wearing. Descriptions of academic gowns/costumes for the various degrees are as follows:

Masters

Gown of traditional master's shape adapted to Nigerian use. Indigo-blue, simple shape, edged with two inches of Faculty colour silk and lined throughout with the University green silk. Indigo-blue cloth cap of traditional master board shape with black tassel completes the costumes with regular board having their respective faculty colours.

M.Phil

The gown for the Master's degree is retained for the M.Phil. albeit with a slight modification: both sleeves in red colour (without cuffs), and with regular hood having their respective faculty colours. 2 UI logo-plates, each adorning the breast/chest.

Doctorates (Ph.D, M.D.)

Gown of traditional doctor's shape adapted to Nigerian use. Silk-red gown, full bell sleeves (without cuff) with three (3) stripes (Faculty, hedged with gold rims, 2 UI logo-plates, each adorns or adorning the breast/chest. Use of existing detached hood with Faculty colour-hem. Indigo-blue velvet cap of traditional mortar shape with black tassel in Faculty colour designed round cap in suitable motifs.

Higher Doctorates (D. Sc. D. Litt., LL. D.)

Gown of traditional doctor's shape adapted to Nigerian use. Silk-red gown, full bell sleeves with cuff, both sleeves having three (3) indigo stripes, each stripe hedged with gold-rims, 2 UI logo-plates, each adorning the breast/chest.

A semi-detached naval hood with UI logo perched at the centre adorning the upper rear of the gown. Indigo-blue velvet cap of traditional mortar board shape with black tassel designed round cap in suitable Nigerian motifs. For LL. D. however, the faculty colour shall be blue of the Faculty of Law of the University of Ibadan.

The Captains

In more senses than one, it is right to refer to the administrators of UI as captains. First, the leaders of this University, over the years, have served with a deep sense of commitment, responsibility and responsiveness which are the qualities of a good captain. Second, the central meeting place of the University, the Trenchard Hall, has the shape of a ship. With its proximity to the Central Administration Block, that building, through its shape, reminds our leaders of their designation as captains indeed. Following is a list of some of those captains: Vice-Chancellors, Registrars, and Bursars from 1948 to 2021.

UI Security Service Unit

THE POSTGRADUATE COLLEGE UNIVERSITY OF IBADAN, NIGERIA ...the flagship of postgraduate education in Nigeria

Under a special arrangement with the University of London, UI began postgraduate training shortly after it came into existence. Thus, the first Ph.D was awarded in Zoology in 1952 to Dr Sanya Dojo Onabamiro. During the 14 years that the special relationship lasted, 37 Postgraduate Diplomas, 18 Master and 44 Doctoral degrees were awarded. The degrees bore the name of the University of London.

With the termination of the special relationship in 1962, UI began fully independent postgraduate studies. It admitted 101 students for such studies in 1962. The number rose sharply in the years that followed. For instance, 216 students were admitted in 1965. In 1964, two doctoral degrees were awarded in the then world-famous Department of History.

Given the rapid growth of postgraduate studies, the University Senate set up a central body, the Higher Degree Committee, in 1963, to coordinate all postgraduate programmes. The volume of work coming from the faculties, however, soon became too heavy for the Committee. As a result, in 1970, Senate established Board of Postgraduate Studies to replace the Higher Degree Committee. The Board had the power to exercise its own initiative in the development of postgraduate studies in the University. That Board was headed by Professor A. I. Etteh of the Department of Physics.

In 1975, the Federal Government designated UI as the Centre of Excellence for postgraduate studies in Nigeria. This was in direct agreement with the dream which had been declared and nursed by Prof Kenneth Dike in 1962 when UI began fully-UI postgraduate studies. With the new designation, it became clear that the Board of Postgraduate Studies needed fresh mandate and space. On June 28, 1976, Senate approved the re-organisation of the Board of Postgraduate School into a School of Postgraduate Studies. The title 'chairman' of the Board became 'Dean'. The serving Chairman of the Board, Prof A. I. Etteh then became the pioneer Dean of the Postgraduate School, University of Ibadan.

Decades after the PG School was officially inaugurated, it continues to dictate the pace in postgraduate studies in Nigeria and in sub-Saharan Africa. Applications for admission into its various programmes pour in thousands every year. For instance, in November 2010, it graduated 2,589 candidates including 159 Ph.Ds. The establishment of private universities in the country has meant much greater demand for postgraduate education and, of course, greater pressure on the University of Ibadan PG School for admission. Fortunately, the PG School and UI are up to the task.

Due to the increase in student enrolment and enlargement of the Postgraduate School activities, Senate recommended its re-organisation to a College on 3 August, 2018. This recommendation was approved by the University Governing Council on 5 October, 2018. Since then, the status of the Postgraduate School was upgraded to that of a College. At present, the College has about fifteen thousand registered postgraduate students in the university.

The Postgraduate College, as presently structured, comprises postgraduate teachers based in the University departments and their inputs into the decision-making process of the college made through their respective Deans and Sub-Deans (Postgraduate) of Faculties Representatives, and the Heads of Departments who are the Chief Examiners of departmental postgraduate examinations.

The management of the Postgraduate College is vested in the Board of the Postgraduate College and the Executive Committee, both bodies being statutorily headed by the Provost. The structure and philosophy behind the establishment of the Postgraduate College by Senate evolved over the years after a series of deliberations by many committees set up both at Faculties and the Postgraduate College levels. The structure essentially makes the College a central coordinating body, which acts on behalf of Senate to streamline and harmonise University postgraduate regulations and programmes in addition to ensuring maintenance of the culture of excellence in postgraduate training and research across the faculties in the University.

Furthermore, the Postgraduate College is actively involved in the initiation and development of new relevant inter-faculty postgraduate programmes and in the active search for sources of funding and support for the enlarged postgraduate programmes that makes the University very relevant to its environment. Since its establishment, thirteen Deans and the first Provost have headed the school (now college).

RESIDENTIAL LIFE AND HOUSING

The University has three postgraduate halls of residence within a walking distance of the University Library. Only bonafide registered students (except sub-degree students) of the University are allowed to live in Halls of residence. Accommodation in halls of residence is a privilege and not a right since the demand for hall accommodation far exceeds the number of available bed spaces. All rooms are therefore allocated to qualified students on the basis of first-come first-served. The system of accommodation is that of two or three students sharing a room in accordance with architectural design. Resident students must abide by the rules and regulations governing all residents in each hall. Unlike in the undergraduate housing system where male and female students are housed in different halls, all postgraduate halls house both male and female students but in separate blocks.

Tafawa Balewa Hall

Tafawa Balewa Hall is located along El-Kanemi Road and directly behind Sultan Bello Hall. Tafawa Balewa Hall is the University's first postgraduate hall of residence. It was opened in 1968. The hall has a capacity for 207 students.

Obafemi Awolowo Hall

Obafemi Awolowo Hall is located off Barth Road. It was made an autonomous hall of residence in February 1986. It currently houses about 700 students on the average. Some of the blocks in Awolowo Hall are occupied by undergraduate students.

Abdulsalami Abubakar Hall

Abdulsalami Abubakar Hall is located along Barth Road, and opposite Idia Hall. The building was kindly donated to the University during her 50th Anniversary in 1998. The hall houses about 700 postgraduate students in single-, double- and three- bedded rooms.

The Lodging office assists in securing off-campus accommodation near the University campus for those unable to secure accommodation in the halls of residence.

INTRA-CAMPUS TRANSPORTATION

Transportation on campus is by campus cabs, private cars, tricycles and trekking. A few students ride bicycles and private motorcycles. It costs about N100 – N150 to hire a car from any part of the campus to another. To join in a car costs N30 – N50. You can identify a campus cab by the yellow sign it carries on its roof. Commercial tricycles run in the morning through the evening hours. The cost of a ride depends on the distance, the time of the day or night, and your bargaining skills. The maximum may be about N150. Many students trek across campus. The renovation of walk-ways has made trekking easier and safer.

FEEDING/CATERING FACILITIES

Reputed caterers provide catering services in each hall of residence and within some departments and most faculties in the University. Students buy their food on the basis of what they can afford. Each cafeteria opens at 7.00a.m and closes at 9.00p.m daily. Food is also available at U & I, a fast foods outlet that belongs to the UI Ventures. Commissioned in May 2004, U & I is located beside Abdulsalami Abubakar Hall. Its services include the production and sales of all pastry foods, continental and African dishes, as well as catering services. U & I also has a small hall for which students and staff can pay and hold parties during the day.

LIBRARY FACILITIES

The University of Ibadan confers on the Library the responsibility of providing information resources (books, journals, reports, monographs, electronic based materials etc.) in support of its teaching and research mandates. Pursuant to the actualization of this responsibility the University maintains a Library System with Kenneth Dike Library (KDL) as the main library or arrow head of the system. Other Libraries in the system are Latunde Odeku Medical Library which is located about eight (8) kilometres at the College of Medicine, 26 faculty, Departmental and Institute Libraries. The collections of these Libraries consist of books, journals, dissertations, technical reports and monographs including materials of historical nature such as the Africana collections. In recent times, and as part of the global shift from hardcopy information prints to electronic based ones, the Library decided to subscribe to a number of electronic databases consisting of journals, monograph and reports. Some of these databases are JSTOR, AGORA, HINARI, OARE etc.

Access to the databases is Internet Protocol (IP) address controlled. This means that they can be accessed by logging into the University network while on the Campus. Outside the campus, the individual can access them through passwords which the Library restricts. All users must be registered every academic session and are issued with reader's tickets. The Library is open from 8.00a.m to 10.00p.m on weekdays; 8.00a.m to 1.00p.m on Saturdays and 5.00p.m to 10.00p.m on Sundays during sessions. During semester breaks and long vacations, the library is open from 8.00a.m to 6.00p.m on week days and from 8.00a.m to 1:00p.m on Saturdays.

There are also good libraries in neighbouring institutes and centres. On the campus are the IFRA library located in the Institute of African Studies and the WORDOC library located at the Lady Bank Anthony Hall, adjacent to the Institute of African Studies. There are libraries also at the seventy-year old Forestry Research Institute of Nigeria (FRIN) located at Jericho; the National Institute for Socio-Economic Research (NISER) on Oyo Road, about a kilometre from UI Second Gate. electronic materials. IITA is located in Moniya, on the Old Oyo Road. An office of the National Archives is also located on campus. IBADAN CITY: THE INTELLECTUAL CAPITAL OF NIGERIA

The city of Ibadan is an ancient and historical city. Originally known as Eba Odan (meaning beside the savannah), Ibadan was founded in 1829 by a man known as Lagelu. With his people, Lagelu was later displaced and had to seek refuge in a hill where he fed on snails and maize grill. This is why snail eating features prominently in Ibadan praise names. After the wars, people from all over Westem Nigeria settled in Ibadan. Located on the link between Lagos and the North, Ibadan soon became a thriving commercial centre.

The city is distinguished for having many 'firsts': in it are the first television station in Africa, the first Olympic-size Stadium in Africa, and the first university in Nigeria. It also houses the National Archives and the famous Cocoa House (once the tallest building in Ibadan) and several research institutes, such as the Intemational Institute for Tropical Agriculture (IITA), Institute of Agricultural Research and Training (IAR&T), Federal Research Institute of Nigeria (FRIN), National Institute for Horticulture, and Cocoa Research Institute of Nigeria (CRIN). Ibadan was the seat of Westem Region government. Today, the city has a population of 1.3million people (2006 Census), the third largest (by population) in Nigeria. The city is home to people of every ethnic group and tongue from Nigeria and beyond. In Ibadan are found many places of interest, some of which are described here.
